New Business:

Campaign material and other electioneering policy discussion

Chairman Shedd introduced discussion regarding enforcement and interpretation of the 500-foot campaign-free zone. Interim Director Wooten reported that staff reviewed applicable law, training materials, and the poll manager handbook and invited county-level feedback. Greenville County Director Conway Belangia was recognized.

Counsel Nicholson summarized the statute, noting ambiguity regarding where the 500-foot measurement begins. Interim Director Wooten cited statutory language referencing entrances used during polling hours. Counsel Nicholson advised that while the Commission may adopt clarifying policy, such action could be subject to legal challenge and suggested seeking legislative clarification. Interim Director Wooten noted that certain terms in Commission policy, including “candidate representative,” are not expressly included in statute.

Mr. Belangia stated that the 2022 expansion of the campaign-free zone from 200 to 500 feet has not resolved voter concerns. He reported continued complaints regarding voter influence near polling place entrances and emphasized that enforcement is complicated by private property limitations. He recommended statutory clarification, broader interpretation of campaign material, and consistent guidance in the poll worker handbook. He noted this is one of the most frequent issues faced by county election offices.

Commissioners discussed candidate and representative access to polling places, enforcement limitations, and the importance of minimizing voter influence while preserving transparency. The Commission agreed that the issue warrants further policy review and potential legislative engagement.

Employee Bonuses

Interim Director Wooten reported that the agency has historically issued employee bonuses twice annually and has authority to do so. The proposed bonuses would total $1,500 per eligible employee, consistent with prior practice. Ms. LaToria Williams confirmed that bonus practices vary across agencies and depend on available budget resources.

Commissioners discussed the relationship between bonuses, cost-of-living adjustments, and prior recruitment and retention funding. Chairman Shedd expressed support for the proposed bonuses, citing staff performance and challenges faced during the year. Commissioners expressed appreciation for improved communication and regular updates from agency leadership.

State Board of Canvassers meeting schedule

The Commission discussed scheduling to allow county staff and canvassers to conclude duties earlier in the day. Interim Director Wooten explained that earlier meeting times allow staff sufficient preparation time.
